Child Protection Office (CPO)

Child Protection Officer – each club should have a designated person who co-ordinates all of the child protection related procedures in the club

Lead Person

Volunteer Scotland require each club to appoint a Lead Person to be responsible for all PVG Scheme related activities. This may, but does not have to be, the same person as the CPO.

PVG Scheme

Protecting Vulnerable Groups Scheme ensures that any adults carrying out regulated work are not barred from doing so. The term ‘vulnerable groups’ consists of 2 strands – children and protected adults.

<https://www.disclosurescotland.co.uk/disclosureinformation/pvgscheme.htm>

Child

For the purposes of child protection a person is considered a child up to the age of 18

Protected Adult

A protected adult is defined as a person aged 16 or over who receive one or more type of care of welfare service either regularly or for a short period of time. The definition of a protected adult can be found in Section 94 of the Protection of Vulnerable Groups Act (Scotland) 1997 <http://www.legislation.gov.uk/asp/2007/14/contents> .

Regulated Work

The definitions of regulated work for children and protected adults can be found in Schedules 2 and 3 of the Protection of Vulnerable Groups Act (Scotland) 1997 and are summarised here for SCDA purposes as

Teaching, instructing, training or supervising children/protected adults (except teaching, instructing, or training children or protected adults which is merely incidental to teaching instructing or training individuals who are not children or protected adults)

SCDA has agreed with Volunteer Scotland that the following roles constitute regulated work (where aimed specifically at children or protected adults) and therefore all individuals carrying out these roles must obtain a PVG scheme record

- Director
- Choreographer
- Musical Director
- Stage Manager
- Rehearsal Assistant
- Wardrobe Assistant
- Chaperone
- Charity Trustee – Children’s Charities only

SCDA strongly recommends that you sign up to receive regular updates from Volunteer Scotland to ensure that you are informed of any updates or additions to requirements. You can do that here <https://www.volunteerscotland.net/for-organisations/disclosure-services/>

Scda Child Protection Policy

It is the policy of Scottish Community Drama Association to ensure that all participants in workshops, festivals and drama productions are safeguarded from physical, sexual and emotional harm while taking part.

SCDA requires that all tutors, workshop leaders or helpers, production staff and other paid or voluntary helpers working with children and young people follow the Code of Conduct set out below. There are particular rules for Festivals, which are available separately.

Administration of an Event

All SCDA event organisers must adhere to the following good practice

- Carry out a risk assessment of the event, and ensure that risk is minimised
- Appoint a designated Child Protection Officer/Lead Person (CPO), to whom any allegations or incidents are reported. They should be aware of the appropriate contact points within police, social work and, where appropriate, the local authority Child Protection Committee.
- Ensure that all staff or volunteers who are carrying out regulated work are a member of the PVG (Protecting Vulnerable Groups) Scheme
- Ensure that staff or volunteers who are not members of the PVG Scheme either because they are not carrying out regulated work or vetting is in progress, are never alone with children at any time
- Ensure that all participants – parents, helpers, volunteers are fully aware of their responsibilities under the law.

What to do if something goes wrong?

If you have any reason to suspect that a child or young person is being abused:

- Inform the CPO immediately of your concerns
- Make a written record of all details of the facts known to you, and give a copy to the CPO
- The CPO must then contact the Local Child Protection Committee for advice on how to proceed.

If a child or young person tells you about abuse by someone else:

- Stay calm, do not be shocked, and try to act normally
- Allow the individual to speak freely, without interruption, but do not question them or attempt to investigate yourself
- Offer support and reassurance, assure them that you believe what they say. Explain that you cannot keep it a secret, and that you will speak to a designated person about it
- Report the matter as detailed above.

If you receive an allegation of abuse about any other Leader, or about yourself,

- Immediately inform the National Drama Advisor at SCDA, and keep a written record of all the facts as you know them.

- Try to ensure that no-one is placed in a position which could lead to further compromise.
- Contact your Local Child Protection Committee for advice on how to proceed.

Specific procedures for SCDA Festivals are available on the Festival Forms section of our website www.scda.org.uk

Have fun and be safe

A General Guide to protecting young people in your drama group

Taking part in a drama group provides young people with valuable and challenging learning experiences, as well as offering fun, and a change of environment.

All activity involves an element of risk. Youth drama leaders cannot give absolute guarantees of safety to young people and their parents/carers. But we must make sure that all possible precautions are taken to reduce the possibility of accidents and minimise danger.

Volunteers working with young people in drama groups have a legal duty of care towards young people under 18 or protected adults.

Putting a care and protection framework in place for your club is not difficult – it is just good sense. Here are the key ingredients for a safer club:

- Carry out a risk assessment. Your duty of care starts as soon as the young person arrives at your club premises. You remain in charge until the young person leaves your premises. You must think about all the possible hazards they might meet between those two points. You then need to consider what you can do to reduce the risk. You need to put safeguards in place and agree what actions you will take if something goes wrong. You are used to carrying out health and safety risk assessments for productions. You simply need to think about the other hazards, including humans who may wish to bring harm to children or young people.
- Plan what adult “staff” you will need. Ideally, you should have at least 1 adult for every 8 children in your group. Parents can come along as helpers, but they need to agree to follow the club code of conduct. Each regular helper should have a written remit – a clear statement of what their duties will be. This avoids misunderstanding or arguments if things go wrong. Remember, volunteer helpers are legally responsible, just as paid staff would be.
- Issue the SCDA Child Protection Policy /Code of Conduct. Make sure the adult helpers know and understand the code of conduct. It protects them as much as the young people.

There should be at least one person in your club who takes overall responsibility for Child Protection. They should be prepared to take the lead in carrying out vetting through the PVG Scheme and keep up to date with the latest procedures.

If something goes wrong, such as an adult behaving badly, volunteers may be afraid to disclose this to the club leader, especially if the wrongdoer is a friend. It’s important that volunteers know in advance what to do if they are concerned. The CPO should make sure of this by updating everyone on an annual basis.

In your risk assessment, you need to have thought about the worst case scenario. What will you do if a trusted friend of the club behaves improperly? Think about this beforehand, and put clear procedures in place that everyone understands.

SCDA Headquarters is a one-stop shop for advice, information and support on all aspects of working with children and young people. Please do not hesitate to get in touch. We can also put you in touch with people in your local area or Volunteer Scotland for more direct help and advice.

Remember – it is everyone’s job to make sure children are safe!

Creating A Care And Protection Framework For Your Club

Introduction

Child protection is the responsibility of every adult who has involvement with children.

Children have the right to be protected from abuse and harm at all times and in all situations. This booklet has been designed to help your drama group protect these rights.

What is Child Protection?

The Children (Scotland) Act 1995 states that each child has the right to protection from all forms of abuse, neglect or exploitations. It also states that children should have the right to express their views on any issues or decisions affecting them.

As a community group, you offer a very valuable service to children. Through your group, they are able to take part in a worthwhile community activity. They also learn to trust and respect the adults involved. This places your volunteers in a unique position in children's lives. There may come a time when a child feels the need to confide in a volunteer, or when a volunteer feels that all is not well in the child's life.

Your group has a duty to make sure that volunteers know how to give a child the support, guidance and help that they need. Child Protection policies are produced to help you and your volunteers think through the issues and to develop your own child protection framework. It will also help you consider any training that you might need.

What is Child Abuse?

The formal definition of Child Abuse is:

"children may be in need of protection where their basic needs are not being met, in a manner appropriate to their age and stage of development, and they will be at risk through avoidable acts of commission or omission on the part of their parent(s), sibling(s) or other relative(s) or a carer (i.e. the person while not a parent who has actual custody of the child)."

This is a very open definition encouraging us to be open minded and think about what child abuse is. For those working in Child Protection, the definition tends to be broken down into the following sub-categories:

Physical Injury

Sexual Abuse

Emotional Abuse

Physical Neglect

Non-organic failure to thrive

A review of Child Protection in Scotland led to the publication of "It's everybody's job to make sure I'm alright" (2002). Out of this review has come a number of initiatives including the Framework for Standards and the Children's Charter.

"The welfare of the child is paramount.....Everyone involved in working with children has a fundamental duty of care towards them" Scottish Executive 2004

Reducing The Risk Of Harm

Your Organisation

As a youth drama group, or an adult group with a youth section, you have a duty of care towards all young people under 18 and protected adults. You should appoint a Child Protection Officer (CPO), who will gather the information needed to help you, and who can ensure that everyone knows the right thing to do. This person will be the first point of contact for anyone with concerns about a child's welfare, and would be responsible for reporting concerns about Child Abuse to the statutory agencies. However, it will be important to emphasise that child protection is a whole-club responsibility, and that the role of a CPO is to co-ordinate the implementation of child protection procedures in the club.

You will also need to appoint a Lead Person who will be the point of contact with Volunteer Scotland in order to carry out PVG scheme membership for people carrying out regulated work. This may or may not be the same person depending on the needs of your club and people available to take up the role(s).

It is important to ensure club members understand that the child protection procedures apply to them. It is not just about protecting children from adults who want to access them through drama. It is also about ensuring that volunteers know what to do if a child tells a trusted director or leader about abuse happening outside of your activity.

Your Premises

Getting into the building

Make sure parents know what time the group starts, and discourage young people from arriving too early. Introduce a signing in (and out) book, as well as agreeing a limited or no re-entry system if that feels appropriate for your group. It is important that young people are aware of the issues around fire safety and the need for the youth group to be able to account for members in case of a fire etc. You should remind parents that the drama group's role of care is only on the premises – it might also be useful to negotiate that certain areas within the vicinity of the group, such as the car park, are out of bounds during opening hours.

Your adult volunteers should have a "closing" procedure, to make sure that all young people have left the premises safely. If a child has been left behind, or a parent fails to collect them, you must have an emergency contact number so that the situation can be reported. A lone adult should not escort the child home without permission.

Safe Inside

The safety of the group and volunteers once they are inside the premises is very important. Health and Safety might not be exciting, but to ensure the safety of everyone who is involved in the group you should pay close and regular attention to it. You should:

- Identify a health and safety volunteer
- Have an accident/incident book
- Have a fire drill at least once a year
- Check fire exits and first aid box regularly
- Know what to do in an emergency
- Make sure at least one adult has some first aid training

- Have a regular meeting where adults and young people can review procedures and make changes if they are needed

During Activity

In your risk assessment, you should identify all potential hazards and think of how to eliminate them. For example, if you rehearse on the floor of a hall when a set is being built onstage, you will have to consider the safety issues around tools, knives, potential tripping hazards etc. If you split into small groups to rehearse, will an adult be alone with a child or small group of children? Might an adult decide to drive to a DIY store to get materials – will he take a child with him? On show nights, who gets access to dressing rooms? What are the implications of having mobile phones with cameras in areas where people are changing? Work out in advance what is allowed and what is not, so that everyone is clear.

For adult protection, you should avoid situations where an adult is alone with a child, for any reason. It is not always possible to avoid this, but adults should be clear that this is not to be encouraged. If there are adults who do need to be alone with children, they should always be a member of the PVG Scheme and been vetted by the club.

The young people could be encouraged to contribute to setting a behaviour contract. They can help draw up rules for the session. Once agreed by everyone, the rules should be displayed in the rehearsal area for everyone to see. Young people should know what sanctions are imposed if rules are broken.

Bullying behaviour should be actively discouraged. Bullying or offensive attitudes can come from both adults and young people, and need to be guarded against. Club leaders should also make sure that volunteers and young people are aware of language not considered acceptable today.

The aim should be to ensure that your drama group has a good ethos, and would not be off-putting to people from different racial groups or children with disabilities.

The End of the Activity

Young children can sometimes be found alone at the end of activities or in public spaces without adequate parental supervision. Leaders should always take action if they see a young child who:

- Seems lost and nervous
- Seems reluctant to go home at closing time
- States that they do not want to go home
- States that they are meant to have been collected by an adult who has failed to do so.
- Where a leader is concerned that a child has been left alone or is concerned about going home, they should take the following steps:
 - Ask the child where they live and how far the journey home is
 - Establish if there are any dangers to letting the child go home alone and unsupervised
 - Try to establish the name, address and telephone number of the parent/carer and if this fails contact the Police for advice

Under no circumstances should a child be escorted home by a lone worker/volunteer

Keeping A Safe Environment

Child Protection Policy and Procedures

It is a key requirement of any organisation working with young people that they have a clear and concise Child Protection Policy. This has to be more than a piece of paper. It will shape all your procedures and practices around:

Recruitment and selection of staff or volunteers

Programme planning and residential

Support, networking and training

Complaints and accidents procedures

SCDA has produced a template for a Child Protection Policy which is included towards the end of this document. You may adjust this to suit your club. You can also find examples online at Volunteer Scotland and Voluntary Arts Scotland.

Recruitment and Selection of Volunteers

Few groups have a steady stream of new volunteers ready to sign up to the group. Most often, people drag along friends to help out. It is a good idea to develop a welcome procedure that includes an informal interview or chat. That way, you can check out their attitude, skills and interests. For safety, new volunteers should be asked to fill in a form and provide a reference. Create a standard request for a reference, including an invitation to the referee to phone and discuss any concerns or issues not easily covered in a letter.

All potential recruits should be asked the same set of questions, so it is worth planning in advance what those should be. You should have a Job Description or Role Description, which shows the potential volunteer what they will be expected to do. This will allow the potential recruit to ask questions about the job.

Don't feel that you have to say "yes" to every offer of help you get – be prepared to say "No" to people if you feel they are not what you are looking for. You should also remember that potential volunteers might want to say "No" to your group as well.

Police Checks

An important part of recruitment and selection procedures is the process of undertaking police checks for new adult leaders. These checks are helpful in that they provide up to date information on the applicant's criminal record history and in some cases will include non-conviction information held by the Police.

If the role that your volunteer will have in the drama group involves regulated work with young people under 18 years of age, then they should be a member of the PVG Scheme. Once a member of the PVG Scheme their membership records will be automatically updated if any new vetting information arises. Vetting information is conviction information retrieved from criminal justice systems and non-conviction information held by the police that is considered relevant.

How do we access Police Checks?

Clubs need to enrol with Volunteer Scotland in order to carry out their own checks. It is a fairly straightforward process. More information can be found on the website <http://www.volunteerscotland.net/disclosure-services>

How do we handle the results of a Police Check?

All clubs will need to adhere to a secure handling procedure. A template policy is provided by Volunteer Scotland.

Once The Team Is In Place

Supporting your team

Sometimes volunteers are thrown in at the deep end, with no background information about what the rules and procedures are, or where they can get some advice and support. Your group should have an induction pack and programme for new volunteers that includes information on fire exits, as well as procedures and rules. In order to ease people in gently, consider giving them a “buddy” who can keep an eye on them and they know will be happy to give advice and support.

Ongoing Support

Once youth volunteers are in place, it is easy to forget that they may need training and support, especially if they have been in the group for a long time. It’s also important to ensure that all your volunteers are consistent in their work with young people. A regular 15-minute session where the volunteers can chat about issues and agree on what is needed can be very valuable.

Keep up to date

As part of being a youth leader you build up a close trusting relationship with the young people you are working with. You need to look closely at your practice because people working with children and young people are under scrutiny more than ever before.

The expectations of young people, their parents and your local community are constantly changing. What was considered acceptable a few years ago may be considered unacceptable and may be even dangerous today.

Being Aware

Code of Conduct

It is useful for a youth group to have a written code of conduct for everyone within the group. This not only tells parents and members what standard of behaviour to expect, but provides all volunteers with clear guidance on how to be have when working with young people in your drama group. It is also a good idea to ask adult volunteers to sign up to the code of conduct. You will find a template for a Code of Conduct towards the end of this document if you wish to use it.

Parental Consent

Your programme will probably include a wide range of activities. In addition to your rehearsals or workshops, you might offer trips away from your usual meeting place to take part in competitions or festivals or to see theatre performances. You need to get the permission of parents before they are able to attend. A consent form should give you any specific information that you need to ensure the safety of the young people while you are away. As well as emergency contact numbers, you will need medical information. A sample consent form is included in this document however SCDA recommends that you update where necessary to provide complete clarity and agreement over where your responsibility begins and ends.

Video and Photography – taking and using images of children

Photographs can be used as a means of identifying children when they are accompanied by personal information. For example, the name of the child and the club/organisation/school which she belongs to. This information can make children vulnerable to individuals who may wish to “groom” them for abuse. Photo images can be used or adapted for inappropriate use.

The following guidance is recommended:

If photos of children are to be published, the name of the child should not be given

Where it is necessary to publish the name of a child, it should not be supported by a photograph

Parents/carers and children where possible/appropriate should give their written consent for images and names to be used

Consent should be obtained through a written document and is included in the Parental Consent form included in this document.

Dressing Up

Children may be required to dress in costume. Where possible, costumes should not require children to undress in public areas, but should cover their own clothes. Where children are required to undress, it is crucial that adults respect their rights to privacy and dignity and provide suitable changing facilities which are supervised. These areas must be restricted to adults who have a legitimate right to be there. Very young children and those with special needs may need to be supported by their parents/carers, but those adults must respect the privacy of other children in the area.

Some drama groups have very limited space, and it is difficult to provide privacy. Groups often get round this by having the children dress at home, and come to the venue in costume. Temporary screens can be erected, but they must be chaperoned carefully.

Positions of Trust

Youth drama leaders build up close working relationships with young people. In fact, this is recognised as an important and valuable thing. However, there is a need to ensure that it remains on a “professional” level, and that those working with young people are aware of their own boundaries.

Your code of conduct should explicitly ban sexual and emotional relationships with young people aged 16-18 where one of the partners is in a position of trust – i.e. youth leader and member.

Note: Section 3 of the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 2000 provides for an offence of abuse of trust, which covers consensual sexual relationships within certain relationships of trust. It is now an offence for a person aged 18 or over to have a sexual relationship with a person under 18 where they are deemed to be in a position of trust. This would apply to a relationship between a youth worker and a young person in the drama group.

Safe Touching

We often hear adults saying that they are afraid to touch a child, in case they are accused of abuse. And some organisations have banned touching under any circumstances. Good sense needs to prevail. Here are some sensible rules to follow:

Workers should always be able to justify physical contact with a child in any situation. Openness and transparency are the key rules. If the activity you are involved in requires you to touch children, then the following points should be followed:

- Make sure the child is aware of why you need to touch them. Explain to them what you are doing
- Inform parents/carers that touching their child is an integral part of the instruction you are giving
- Make sure that the activity happens in an open space with other adults close by
- Touching should be strictly limited to the level of contact necessary for instruction
- All adult volunteers should be vigilant and pass on any concerns about other adults.
- Physical contact to reassure a child who has hurt themselves or is upset should be agreeable to both the child and adult. It should be limited and appropriate to the child's gender, age, and background.

Dealing With Problems

Incidents

Inevitably incidents happen in a youth group that need the intervention of an adult. There may well be differences in how each worker will respond to a situation, but it is important that the same procedures are followed by everyone. Any accidents or incidents should be recorded, and time is set aside to discuss whether any changes to procedures should be made as a result of the incident.

Youth workers can find themselves in potentially difficult and vulnerable positions, which could be easily misinterpreted. You have a responsibility to look at your activities and that of your colleagues on a regular basis to see if it can be improved or changed in line with current expectations.

Any allegations, complaints or suspicion of abuse should be recorded as near to the time of the incident as possible. The form should be signed and dated by the person reporting the incident. The person receiving the report should record what action they took and why. If they referred the case on to anyone else, this should also be recorded with the reason for the referral.

A template of an incident report form is included in this pack.

The completed form should be kept in a secure safe place with limited access.

Dealing with an Accident

An accident form should be completed by the youth drama leader who was in charge at the time of the accident. As with the incident report, an accident report should include the date and time of the accident, who was involved, what happened, and the name and role of the person completing the form. The group should consider what needs to be done to improve safety and this might involve speaking to the landlord or owner of the premises about safety concerns. If there is a pattern of accidents at certain times, or when certain leaders are in charge, this might indicate that some procedures have to change, or the leader may need some support.

Dealing with Allegations of abuse or misconduct

All your volunteers should know how to respond to a child who alleges abuse. It is important that they follow the guidance below and appreciate fully the difficulties which may arise if procedure is not followed properly.

There is a belief that children will only make an allegation of abuse to adults they have known for some time. This is not necessarily the case and workers who do not have long term and sustained contact with children should be aware of the possibility of receiving an allegation.

If a child alleges that they have been abused, or the organisation has received a third party report that a child is being abused or neglected, or there are signs that could point to abuse or neglect, your organisation has a duty to report the concern to your local child protection agency. Your Child Protection Officer should already know how to do this, and who to contact.

If a child or young person alleges that they have been harmed by a worker; if a parent, carer or other individual from outwith the organisation alleges that a child has been harmed by a worker, or if other workers have concerns about a worker's behaviour towards children or young people, this allegation MUST be reported.

In all of the above circumstances, you should under no circumstances try to investigate this yourselves – you should follow the guidelines in the SCDA Child Protection Policy.

Dealing with confidential Information

In the course of dealing with a child protection incident, obtaining vetting information or safe working data you may find yourself in the possession of sensitive information. It is essential that your organisation ensures that any information relating to individuals is stored in accordance with GDPR: Data Protection legislation (please refer to the SCDA website for more information about GDPR if required).

Child protection procedures:

Adult clubs occasionally involving children in a show – referred to as “incidental” in PVG legislation

Background

As you know, SCDA is proud to be a supporter of the very best practice in child care. We know that taking part in drama will provide young people with valuable experiences, as well as offering fun, new friendships and a change of environment.

But we also know that the vast majority of abuse is committed by an adult known to the child, either within the family, neighbourhood, or within an activity group such as a club or society. That is why organisations such as the Scouts, Guides, Youth Club networks and SCDA have all taken a lot of time to consider how to protect young people.

Where children are involved in a show as a ‘one-off’ therefore it is not ‘regular’ activity this is referred to as ‘incidental’ and therefore does not require enrolment with the PVG scheme. However, this does not absolve the club for their responsibility to enforce a safe and appropriate environment for everyone.

All events involve an element of risk. Event organisers cannot give absolute guarantees of safety to young people and their parents/carers. But we must make sure that all possible precautions are taken to reduce the possibility of accidents and minimise danger.

Duty of Drama Club Committee

All clubs involving young people in their show must have a “Care and Protection Framework”. Now, don’t panic it’s not as difficult as it may sound and you can use the relevant section in this document for your club if you wish to. The points that follow should help to clarify the main considerations.

1. You are responsible for the child from the moment they are handed into your care, until you hand them back. Parents need to know at what point you take over responsibility and when your responsibility ends. A sign-in sheet for each rehearsal and performance might mark the handover. A chaperone ticking off each child as they leave does the same.
2. Parents should sign a consent form giving permission for their child to take part, and covering other issues such as photography, video and medical needs. SCDA has one that you can use or adapt to suit your event.
3. Your club should nominate someone to be their Child Protection Officer for the Event. They should get some training (free training is provided by Volunteer Scotland, more details can be found here <http://www.volunteerscotland.net/disclosure-services/training/>) Further help and guidance can be provided by the National Drama Advisor who you can contact on nda@scda.org.uk
4. Make sure your Child Protection Officer’s name and how to find them on the night is displayed on posters in dressing rooms and in public areas, so that any concerns can be reported immediately. If possible that person should wear a name badge each night so that they can be found easily.

5. Make sure all your regular club members have a copy of the Child Protection Policy and that they read the Code of Conduct. They might have to modify their usual behaviour if they are not used to having children backstage with them. No drinking or swearing in the dressing room, for example and making appropriate arrangements for children to change (if required – where possible they should come to the theatre already in costume).
6. Carry out a risk assessment. Your duty of care starts as soon as parents/carers “hand over” the young person to you. You remain in charge until the young person is returned to their parent or carer. You must think about all the possible hazards they might meet between those two points. You then need to consider what you can do to reduce the risk. All areas that are medium or high risk need your particular attention. You need to put safeguards in place and agree what actions you will take if something goes wrong. You are used to carrying out health and safety risk assessments. You simply need to think about the other hazards, including humans who may wish to bring harm to children or young people. (SCDA can give you an example of a risk assessment if required)
7. Decide which adults will be in any childcare role during the event. You need to be able to distinguish between family and friends, and those who have been cleared to go into dressing rooms etc. Sensitive areas like this should be supervised to ensure no inappropriate behaviour. This is especially important if your club is not regularly working with children, and therefore your members have not joined the PVG scheme.
8. Some childcare issues have arisen after festivals, at post show events. You are still in charge if the young people have not been handed back to their parents. Think about alcohol and how it can change adults’ behaviour around children. Decide on sensible protection measures for the after-show party!
9. What will you do if someone makes a complaint, or there is an incident? Work out what to do in advance, and make sure the Child Protection Officer knows the procedure. The SCDA National Drama Advisor can talk through the issues with this person before the event takes place.

Joining the PVG Scheme can take several weeks, and involves visual identity checking by a Child Protection Officer. Make sure that you allow plenty of time for checks to be completed and any offences disclosed to be considered. Not every offence will ban the person from carrying out the job. If something shows up on the disclosure check, SCDA’s Child Protection Officer or National Drama Advisor will help you consider what to do next.

If you have any concerns, or need help to understand the procedures, please contact the National Drama Advisor on nda@scda.org.uk

Guidance on use of forms

Forms for New Volunteers

Application form for people carrying out regulated work

Once you know a volunteer is willing to work with your group on an ongoing basis, let them know that as part of the child protection policy, we need to get some details in writing and all information will be handled in compliance with GDPR legislation, further details can be found here <http://www.legislation.gov.uk/ukpga/1998/29/contents> Reassure them that this is a formality, but is important to make sure that people who would like to harm children do not get into clubs. If you already know the person very well, assure them that everyone is asked to do this, just to keep things fair.

They may worry about providing two referees. Ideally we want one character referee and one person who has knowledge of them working with young people. So a doctor or employer can be fine for character reference. If the person is new to volunteering with young people, then a character reference may suffice. Be reasonable about it.

Reference Request

You must take up the references, and follow up with a short phone call if you do not get it back. It may be that someone has a concern, but is afraid to put it in writing. So if you do not get a positive return, follow up.

Self –Declaration Form

While waiting for the reference for a volunteer taking up regulated work, you may decide to ask them to complete a self-declaration form – a template is provided for this in the Appendices. Only the Child Protection Officer for your group is allowed to see this form, and it must be shredded after it is seen. You can retain a list of people who have completed forms, with a date, and a simple yes/no to indicate that they have self-declared that they are suitable to work with young people on that date, they can refuse to complete this. Until a person is formally accepted by your group and a PVG scheme record obtained, they should never be alone with children or young people. All data must be handled in compliance with GDPR legislation.

Forms for Running Activities

Parental Consent form

This should be completed before a child joins in any activities with the club and potentially for each new activity undertaken which is materially different from regular rehearsals/workshops.

Emergency Contact Details

This should be completed before a child joins in any activities with the club. It should also be reviewed on a regular basis in case there have been changes to medication or emergency contact details. We would recommend re-confirming these details on an annual basis.

Accident/Incident Forms

Incident/Disclosure Form

When an incident happens, it is important to record it, even if minor. Sometimes a pattern of incidents can emerge, that become more serious, and the recording can be valuable. Also it is important to know what was said at the time, and who was there. SCDA provides a template, but the form should be accompanied by a briefing note that tells the volunteer what action to take, and who to give the report form to. If the incident involves a disclosure of abuse, or an allegation against a member of staff, then this information must be kept confidential and dealt with by the Child Protection Officer. Allegations must be reported to the statutory agencies, and again, the briefing note should signal that the volunteers must NEVER try to investigate allegations of this kind.

Accident Recording

SCDA has discontinued its own accident report form, because all venues now have to have an accident book but it is your responsibility to check this with the venue for your activities. If your rehearsal venue does not have one, you can purchase it. Good quality first aid kits often include one that complies with the Health and Safety Executive rules.

The HSE Accident Book, BI 510 (ISBN 0717626032) can be ordered directly from HSE Books - call 01787 881165 or visit www.hsebooks.co.uk.

Child / Protected Adult Protection Policy

This policy applies to regulated work with [children / protected adults] as defined in the Protection of Vulnerable Groups (Scotland) Act 2007.

[Club name] aims to ensure that all children and protected adults are kept safe from harm while they are with staff or volunteers in this organisation. In order to achieve this, we will ensure our staff and volunteers are carefully selected, vetted, trained and supervised.

Selection [delete as applicable]

All successful applicants will be asked to complete an application to obtain or update a PVG Scheme Record prior to taking up the post.

Training on specific areas such as health and safety procedures, identifying and reporting abuse, and confidentiality will be given as a priority to new volunteers and will be regularly reviewed.

Reporting Abuse

[Club name] understands that in addition to making a referral (a written report) to Disclosure Scotland, child protection issues must always be referred to the child protection agencies (social work and/or police) for appropriate investigation. Any issues of a criminal nature will be reported to the police.

[Club name] will ensure that everyone involved in recruitment, training and supervision, are aware of this policy and have received appropriate training and support to ensure its full implementation.

Policy on the Recruitment of Ex-Offenders

1. Purpose

Policy on the Recruitment of Ex-Offenders

[Name of Club] is committed to the principle of equality of opportunity and, subject to the over-riding consideration of protecting children and vulnerable adults, undertakes to treat all applicants for positions fairly and not discriminate unfairly against any subject of a police check on the basis of conviction or other information revealed.

2. Scope

- All potential job applicants for paid or unpaid posts
- Existing staff and volunteers who have unsupervised contact with children on a regular basis.

This policy has particular reference to those concerned with recruitment.

3. Policy Statement

As an organisation using the Volunteer Scotland service to assess applicants' suitability for positions of trust, we comply fully with the Code of Practice issued by the Scottish Government (2011) available at

<http://www.disclosurescotland.co.uk/publications/documents/codeofpracticeDocs/PoliceAct1997--CodeofPractice--18February2011.pdf>

We are committed to the fair treatment of its staff, potential staff, volunteers or users of its services, regardless of race, gender, religion, sexual orientation, responsibilities for dependants, age, physical/mental disability or offending background.

We actively promote equality of opportunity for all with the right mix of talent, skills and potential and welcome applications from a wide range of candidates, including those with criminal records. We select all candidates for interview based on their skills, qualifications and experience.

Membership of the PVG Scheme is requested for all adults carrying out regulated work.

Where a formal vetting is to form part of the recruitment process, we encourage all applicants to provide details of their criminal record at an early stage in the application process. We request that this information is sent to the appropriate person.

Unless the nature of the position requires us to ask questions about your entire criminal record we only ask about "unspent" convictions as defined in the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974.

At interview, or in a separate discussion, we ensure that an open and measured discussion takes place on the subject of any offences or other matter that might be relevant to the position. Failure to reveal information that is directly relevant to the position sought could lead to withdrawal of an offer of employment.

A request for PVG membership will only be asked for when an offer has been made.

We make every subject of vetting aware of the existence of the Code of Practice and make a copy available on request.

We undertake to discuss any matter revealed with the person seeking the position before withdrawing a conditional offer.

Having a criminal record will not necessarily bar applicants from working with us. This will depend on the nature of the position and the circumstances and background of the offences with due consideration given to our responsibilities to protect children and protected adults. In particular, when considering the relevance of a criminal record, risk assessments will be based on:

- the seriousness of the offence and its relevance to the safety of service users, other employees, clients and property;
- an examination of any relevant information regarding the circumstances leading up to the offence;
- whether the applicant's circumstances have changed since the offence was committed, making re-offending less likely;
- the length of time since the offence took place;
- the level of supervision required and available, and the ability to manage risks and provide safeguards;
- whether the offence has since been decriminalised by Parliament;
- whether the post involves any direct responsibility for finance or items of value;
- whether the offence was a 'one-off' or part of a history of offending;
- the circumstances surrounding the offence and the explanation(s) offered by the convicted person.

4. Adherence to Policy

Responsibility for the implementation, monitoring and development of this policy lies with the club. Day to day operation of the policy is the responsibility of the [title(s) of office bearer(s)] who will nominate a representative to ensure that this policy is adhered to.

5. Complaints

Any applicant wishing to raise a complaint should do so, in writing, to [title of relevant office bearer] within 15 working days, at the latest, of the alleged incident. An investigation will then be conducted by [title of relevant person] who has not previously been involved in the selection procedure. The ruling will be final. The individual will receive written notification as to the outcome.
